

3
National Humiliation and Repentance recommended, and the Causes of the present Rebellion in AMERICA assigned, in

A

694.L.8.
3

S E R M O N

PREACHED BEFORE THE

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD,

ON FRIDAY, DECEMBER 13. 1776.

Being the DAY appointed by PROCLAMATION for a GENERAL FAST.

BY MYLES COOPER, LL. D.

President of KING'S COLLEGE, NEW YORK; and Fellow of QUEEN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD.

Published at the Request of the VICE-CHANCELLOR and HEADS OF HOUSES.

O X F O R D:

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS.

Sold by J. and J. FLETCHER, S. PARKER, and D. PRINCE. By J. F. and C.
RIVINGTON, in St. Paul's Church-Yard; J. ROSSON, New Bond-street; and J. PRIDDEN, in Fleet-street, London. And by J. WOODYER, at Cambridge.

M DCC LXX VII.

IMPRIMATUR,

GEO. HORNE,

Vice-Can. Oxon.

Decemb. 24. 1776.

PSALM VII. IX. former Part.

OH, LET THE WICKEDNESS OF THE WICKED COME TO AN END; BUT ESTABLISH THE JUST.

THIS Psalm is generally ascribed to DAVID as its Author; but on what particular occasion it was composed, or to what transaction it refers, is not easy, nor is it needful, to determine. The whole Life of this eminent person was a scene of severe trials and uncommon dangers. While a Subject, he was harassed with frequent Persecutions; when a Sovereign, with repeated Rebellions. But his Heart was not daunted or dismayed at the most alarming appearances. In All his difficulties he relied, for safety and protection, on that Goodness, which gradually advanced him from the Sheep-folds, to the Throne of ISRAEL; and in Many of them, he expressed the pious emotions of his soul in those inimitable Hymns, which are graciously preserved for the use of the CHURCH, to assist Our devotion in similar cases.

THE Psalm now before us seems to have been composed, under a keen sense of the injuries he had received, or of the dangers that encompassed him, through the implacable enmity of SAUL, or SHIMEI, or some of their Confederates. It contains an Appeal to the great Searcher of Hearts, for his own innocence and integrity ; a Prayer, that the wicked and malicious purposes of his Enemies might be defeated ; and expressions of strong confidence in the Divine Goodness, to aid him in all his difficulties, and to support him under all his afflictions.

THE words of my Text undoubtedly had reference to some particular case : but as the Terms are general, they may serve to express the wishes and prayers of good men, with regard to Wickedness in general, be the instances of it private or public, more confined or more extended. They are accordingly applicable to the Design of this Day's Solemnity ; which is --- at the Call of a most gracious Sovereign, who is ever anxiously attentive to the welfare of his Kingdoms, and the happiness of his Subjects, --- to humble ourselves before our ALMIGHTY CREATOR --- to confess and bewail our own unworthiness --- to implore the pardon and forgiveness of our manifold offences --- to deprecate those heavy Judgments, which our innumerable Provocations have most justly deserved, --- and then, further, to beseech Him, by the intervention and assistance of his good Providence, to put a speedy End to that enormous wickedness, --- to that wanton and barbarous REBELLION, which, at this time, is deeply distressing to Millions of our Fellow-subjects, and of highly detrimental consequence to the whole British Empire.

THE Propriety and Wisdom, as well as the Piety, of this measure, in the present situation of our public affairs, can hardly be disputed by any who profess and call themselves CHRISTIANS. It is founded on Principles that are common both to natural and revealed Religion. The Principles here meant

meant are such as the following : That He, who created the World by his Power, governs it by his Providence : that his Government of the world includes in it the direction of All events, and especially of those which more immediately concern the general interests of Kingdoms and Nations : That, without his Concurrence, and unattended by his Blessing, effects are not answerable to the appearance of the powers that are to produce them ; -- "the race being not secure to the swift, nor "the battle to the strong : " and, That his Blessing is to be expected, and can properly be requested, only in the way of Obedience and Duty.

In Consequence of these Principles every wise Nation (to say nothing of Individuals) will see the Propriety, in all cases of danger and embarrassment, of interesting in its favour that Superintending and Controlling Power, to which all the Kingdoms of the Earth are subject ; and which conducts, or suspends, or reverses at its pleasure, the natural effects of second and subordinate Causes ; and to that End, will perceive the necessity of fulfilling those Conditions, on which alone all reasonable hopes of obtaining such assistance are founded.

WHERE the Character of a Community is properly virtuous and religious, the Nature of Things, and the Promises of GOD, are its Security : they are such Anchors, as may safely be trusted, amid the greatest Storms and Tempests that can beat upon a State. While " Righteousness exalteth a Nation," --- and strengthens, and renders it respectable, by its natural operation ; it secures these great ends more effectually, by engaging the Favour of Divine Providence. GOD has declared, That "them that honour Him He will honour," --- whilst "they that despise him shall be lightly esteemed."

BUT the great Question is, How is the blessing of heaven to be obtained by a Sinful Nation, suffering under any public calamity? --- Neither Reason nor Revelation can point out any other Means to this End, but that of Changing its character; by "putting away the evil of its doings," --- by "ceasing to do evil, and learning to do well;" or, in other words, by a general Repentance, Reformation, and Amendment.

Now the proper way for a People to enter upon a Reformation, is by a public and solemn act of Humiliation and Abasement; such as we are called upon to perform This Day; in which all Orders of men, from the highest to the lowest, prostrate themselves before the throne of Grace, --- humbly confessing, bewailing, disclaiming and renouncing their past Offences, and forming resolutions of future Obedience.

ALTHOUGH this in itself be not a Reformation, yet it is a proper Beginning; and, when performed in Sincerity, uninfluenced by the too common motives of Hypocrisy or Ostentation, is such an act of homage paid to the great Governor of the Universe, as He often rewards with a signal Blessing.

IT was by a public act of Humiliation, that the infamous and abandoned AHAZ, whose Story disgraces even the ISRAELITISH Annals, averted the stroke of Divine Justice, that was intended for his destruction. It was by a solemn humiliation of this kind, that the destruction of NINEVEH was suspended; although the purposes of Heaven to destroy it within within a few days, had been formally declared, under a special commission, by an inspired Prophet. The tremendous prediction operated aright --- "and the people of NINEVEH believed God and proclaimed a FAST, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them." This was the only expedient that could be suggested, for bringing them within a Possibility of escaping.

THE King, who exercised his authority on the occasion, was a stranger to the general declarations of Divine Revelation; but, from the commonly received notions concerning the measures of Providence, he was led to form some faint Hopes that God, in such a case, would be merciful. "Who can tell (says he) if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?" As the Humiliation was great, and the Repentance sincere, his Hopes were not disappointed: for the narrative proceeds --- "And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil that he had said that he would do unto them, and he did it not."

ON the former of these cases it may be observed, that the fasting and prayers of a notorious Profligate, who had even "sold himself to work wickedness," saved both Him and his Family from the Judgments that awaited them: and it appears, in the latter, that the solemn humiliation and repentance even of a Devoted and Pagan City, could rescue it from the Vengeance, with which it was on the Point of being overwhelmed. These cases are both recorded in Scripture; and the cases there recorded are designed as Instructions and Examples for all succeeding ages.

WHAT

WHAT an Encouragement then do they afford to the duties of this Day ! Especially, if it be also considered, that Cities and States are under such an Equal dispensation of Providence, that their Rewards or Punishments, in this world, always bear some due proportion to their respective prevailing Characters. As to Individuals indeed, the event, with regard to temporal prosperity, may be different : For there is another world for Their reception, where the proper rewards of Individuals are to be distributed ; where, with respect to Them, all the inequalities of this will be fully adjusted ; and where G O D “ will render unto all according to their works :” But, as to Kingdoms and States, this world is the only stage of Their Existence. All earthly societies will, at the latest, be dissolved in the dissolution of the Earth ; and if the virtuous are not rewarded, and the wicked are not punished, in this world, there will be an apparent failure in the administrations of Divine Providence.

THIS Doctrine is confirmed by the history of all ages, and all countries. There never was a virtuous and religious People, that was not rewarded with prosperity and happiness ; nor a wicked and corrupt State, that was not, sooner or later, made to undergo some exemplary punishment ; and we may with confidence pronounce, that there never will be --- unless Degeneracy on the one hand, or Reformation on the other, should interpose to prevent it.

THE foregoing Considerations naturally lead us to reflect on the religious and moral state of This Kingdom in particular, and on the Title It can claim to the blessing of heaven, under its present difficulties.

ON

ON contemplating the Advantages we enjoy, and the Obligations we are under, it might be reasonably expected that our Improvements were eminent; and, as a NATION, that we were a pattern to the WORLD, of every religious, moral, and political Accomplishment. We are enlightened by the full Splendour of the "Sun of Righteousness:" the beams of Revelation have dissipated the clouds that rested on our natural faculties: all the motives to right conduct, whether relating to this world or the next, are placed clearly in our view. Our RELIGION is that of the GOSPEL OF CHRIST --- "pure, "peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy "and good fruits;" and its Efficacy is not obstructed by those Superstitious Impurities, which it had unhappily contracted in its passage through ages and regions of ignorance and darkness. For, by the REFORMATION, it has been restored to its original Perfection; and of Course has recovered its original Quality of being profitable --- "for doctrine, for reproof, for "correction, and instruction in Righteousness."

OUR CIVIL Constitution, which is fair and beautiful in Theory, is admirably fitted for the Regulation of an orderly, if not for the Restraint of an unruly people. If it be wanting in Energy, the defect arises from principles that are friendly, I had almost said partial, to Liberty: And it must be granted, on all hands, that no subjects of any government are so free from arbitrary controul, or enjoy such constitutional Rights, as the subjects of BRITAIN. At the same time, though we are apt to complain of the Weight of our Public Expences, --- yet it is, I believe, an undoubted Fact, that this Burden lies much heavier on the subjects of every neighbouring Kingdom and Republic, Republic, --- and probably of every Independent State upon Earth, where Civilization and Refinement have made any considerable Advances.

WE are also peculiarly happy in the natural Advantages, and in the wonderful Improvements, of this "pleasant Land," of this "goodly heritage," which the Providence of GOD hath allotted to an hitherto-favoured people; through which great Numbers have been raised to Wealth and Affluence, and every prudent and Industrious person amongst us may acquire and enjoy a Comfortable Subsistence, --- with a few exceptions of extraordinary cases, for which the Public is always willing to provide.

WITH these advantages, internal and external, religious and political, we ought to be the most thankful people upon earth; the most virtuous, and the most happy. But what improvements, in this way, have we actually made? What have we "rendered unto the LORD, for all his" distinguishing "Benefits?" --- Time was, when the Inhabitants of this Island had the Character of a sober, virtuous, and religious People: But that time, it is to be feared, is past. For, though Religion has not entirely departed, --- and virtuous examples are to be found in every rank and order of men amongst us; yet he that hath eyes must see that such instances have become rare; so rare indeed, as to carry with them the appearance of Singularity. The want of religious Principle, want of Seriousness, --- gross Sensuality and endless Dissipation, with their natural train of evils, --- too surely constitute the most striking Features, in a true portrait of the present age.

It

It was the Complaint some time ago, made by a very judicious Observer, * but with particular reference indeed to our great Metropolis (though in so short a course of years it is now become almost equally applicable to many inferior places) That "the Gospel of Christ --- had been not only rejected, but
 "treated with a malicious Scorn; and all our hopes in Him
 "represented as delusions and impositions on the weakness of "men: --- that the Press for many years past had swarmed
 "with books, some to dispute, some to ridicule, the great
 "truths of Religion, both natural and revealed: --- that the "Earnestness with which these books were sought after, the "Pleasure and Approbation with which they were received,
 "were too strong indications of the general taste, to be dis-
 "sembled: and the Industry, used to disperse these books,
 "both at home and abroad, and especially IN OUR PLANTA-
 "TIONS IN AMERICA, were proofs of such Malice
 "against the Gospel, and the holy Author of it, as would not "have been borne even in a Mahometan Country."

IN Consequence of such pains taken to unsettle all religious Principles, he observes, That Idleness, and an unquenchable thirst for Pleasure; that Lewdness and Debauchery, Outrage and Violence, immediately ensued: "and that, though Some "have pretended to preserve a Sense of Virtue without the "Aid of Religion, yet Experience has shewed, that people,
 "who have neither hopes nor fears with respect to another
 "world, will soon abuse this, by indulging the worst of their "passions; and will not regard Man, when once they have "learned to disregard G O D."

a Bp. Sherlock's Letter to the Inhabitants of London and Westminster, 1750.

THE above Portrait was drawn near thirty years ago: and if it was a just representation then, the Original, I fear, has not since improved. The great increase of our Wealth, within that period, hath certainly encreased the Means, and too probably the Inclination, to abuse it.

NOW, such Luxury, Vice, and Irreligion, when generally predominant, have commonly proved the Forerunners of some public Calamity, and frequently of national Destruction. Wickedness, if left to itself, would work these effects: but we have seen that the Providence of GOD also interposes, to make those States and Kingdoms the Examples of Punishment, whose Principles and Morals are greatly and grossly corrupted.

INSTRUMENTS of Chastisement can never be wanting to Him, who has all Nature at command; "whom the winds and "the seas obey;" who can stop the Sun in its course, and extinguish the lights of Heaven: but the Sword, the Pestilence, and Famine, are the Judgments, with which he most ordinarily punishes guilty NATIONS.

WAR, at the very best, even when successful, is a sore Visitation; a mark of GOD's anger, under which people ought to tremble, and "learn Righteousness:" but CIVIL WAR is one of the severest scourges of Heaven: it is the Sword of Divine Vengeance, which is two-edged, and wherever it strikes brings double ruin and accumulated destruction. When one part of the force of a nation is employed against the other, it must soon be destroyed, unless the progress of this exterminating evil can be speedily and effectually restrained: for "every

"every Kingdom thus divided against itself, is brought to Desolation," if the contest be suffered to continue.

As a Punishment for the sins of This Nation, for our Immoralities and Corruptions, --- our ingratitude to Heaven, and our neglect of Religion (and perhaps partly for our neglecting to provide properly for the Support of it in our PROVINCES and PLANTATIONS,) --- we are now reduced to this dangerous and critical situation. An Insurrection of the Members against the Head; has thrown the Body into Convulsions which are truly alarming. Or, in other words --- Our most flourishing and populous Colonies, the glory and pride of this Nation, and which have been considered as no small Source of its Strength as well as Affluence, have, on pretences the most frivolous, and with insolence the most provoking, revolted against the Kingdom that produced and protected them. Those Children, whom we nourished and brought up, whom we have fostered in our bosoms, and even pampered with more than parental partiality, have rebelled against us! --- Hear, O Heavens; and give ear, O Earth! If any thing can be still more unnatural and audacious, it is, that these degenerate Insurgents have had their Fomentors and Abettors in the very Heart of this Kingdom; who, forgetful, for a while, of Themselves and their Country, not only appeared publicly and exultingly in our Streets and in our Markets, but too many of them even in our Pulpits --- in our Senate --- in our most secret and most solemn Councils.

WHEN such evils break out against a State, without any just reasons or gross provocations, they seem unquestionable marks of the indignation of Heaven, and can hardly be attributed.

buted to any other cause. It is difficult indeed to assign any reasons, that will Justify the Rebellion of Subjects against the Sovereign Authority. "Submission to the higher powers" ^a is enjoined at least upon Christians, under the severest penalty. But, were Christianity altogether out of the question, yet the insurrection of subjects against their Rightful Governors, is condemned by those Laws which are fundamental to SOCIETY.

THAT which will go farthest in Excusing a Revolt, is the Tyranny of Rulers. But the Rebellion of our Colonies was planned, and fomented, by Its Leaders, without any Pretence of this nature. The Colonists were not in a state of Oppression; nor could they be made to believe that they were. Grievances indeed were pretended; and a List of them was publicly exhibited: But of these, some were evidently no grievances at all; and if any of them were really deemed to be so, they were much more than counterbalanced by peculiar Advantages. In short --- Notwithstanding their Complaints, the Americans knew, and Most of them were willing to confess, "that they were the happiest of all people;" --- seated in the bosom of peace and never-failing plenty, --- enjoying the benefit of mild and equitable Laws, --- secured by the Protection of This Kingdom against every Suspicion of danger from Foreign Invaders, and contributing far less than their Proportion towards defraying the general expences of Government.

How then (it will naturally be asked) could a people, thus happily situated, be persuaded to sacrifice these advantages, and to hazard their Fortunes, their Lives, and their Souls, in such a Rebellion? To this Question a satisfactory answer may be expected, from one who resided in that country, during the time of the apparent rise, and gradual progress of this mischief, till it came to Maturity: And such an answer might indeed be given to the enquiry; but my Time will not allow of that Detail, which is necessary to put the matter in its proper Light, and to exhibit the chief Characters in their genuine colours. I must therefore content myself with the following Observations, viz. --- That Many of the Colonists were of Republican Principles, and had an hereditary disaffection to the English constitution: who wished for an opportunity, and endeavoured to create one, of becoming independent on the parent Kingdom: ---

^a Vid. Rom. XIII.

THAT these persons were persuaded to put themselves under the Direction both of ambitious and needy Adventurers; who, by raising a Storm, were in hopes of advancing their own Interests; --- the former, by getting command of the Vessel; --- the latter, by bearing plunder from the Wreck: ---

THAT the Divisions in This Country, about the Rights of Election, and other subjects of Debate and Altercation; the Triumph of Opposition in some cases; the ill-timed lenity of Government, in yielding to popular Clamours, instanced in the Repeal of an Act which will long be remembered; together with the Assurances given to the Malecontents by their Correspondents here, of being able to afford them all proper support and necessary assistance; --- were thought to be favourable Incidents, and encouraged the Leaders there to risque the Experiment: ---

THAT

THAT, in order to engage the Americans in General to promote the design, its Conductors pretended, That a regular System was formed, "by a corrupt and abandoned Administration," for oppressing and enslaving the colonies; of which every exercise of authority over them, however expedient, or usual, was alledged as a convincing Proof: that such Acts were Invasions of their Natural Rights --- of their Chartered Privileges, --- and even of that unalienable "Liberty wherewith CHRIST had made them free:" that every motive of Prudence, Policy, and Religion, required them to forego all Considerations of present ease and convenience, in a manful and timely Assertion of these Essential Rights, before the Chains that were forged should be rivetted upon them: and lastly, in order to lessen the Horrors of the proposed enterprize, they affirmed, and pretended to prove by accounts from hence, That but little Danger attended it; as the Appearance of Firmness and Unanimity on Their part, would soon compel the Ministry to recede from their claims, and to comply with every demand of the Colonies, rather than contest the matter by Force, --- for which they were not and could not be provided. --- And the people were not persuaded to "take Arms," without the strongest assurances that they would have no occasion to make Use of them.

WHEN the great point of Arming was thus carried, every vile art was practised to inflame the minds of the Populace: Misrepresentation of Facts, false Intelligence, fictitious Letters from England, and even forged Acts of Parliament, all adapted to the occasions of the Day, were warmly and sedulously applied. The Common People were frequently called from their
Ploughs

Ploughs and their Workshops, to concert plans for securing the Liberties of their Country ; --- by which they became sensible of their own Importance. By Them, under the direction of proper Leaders, Committees were chosen, Correspondencies settled, Associations and SOLEMN LEAGUES provided and imposed ; and, to perfect the "good work," Religion itself, or rather the Appearance of it, humbly ministered as an hand-maid to Faction and Sedition. And it is well known, that solemn Prayers, public Fastings, and pathetic Sermons, were some of the most effectual means that were employed to invigorate the Rebellion. Add to This, and it is most worthy of Attention, That, as the plot advanced, the dangerous Consequences of any proposed measures were always concealed, or denied, till they actually happened : And the very Conduct, which the artful Conductors, in imitation of the Father of deceit and rebellion, represented as innocent and warrantable, in order to gain a Compliance, --- after that was secured, they represented as absolutely unpardonable ; so that a retreat was rendered impossible ; and it was then become necessary to go forward, at every hazard, and to the last extremity.

SUCH arts would almost "deceive the Elect ;" and it is no wonder that they prevailed with the ignorant, the prejudiced and unprincipled, to join with the crafty, the profligate and desperate, in executing the measures of their aspiring Demagogues.

THE Remonstrances of his Majesty's well-affected and Loyal Subjects could avail but little : the voice of Reason, drowned in the din of licentious Tumult, was not to be heard : and they, whether Speakers, or Writers, or Printers, who endeavoured deavoured to withstand the Torrent, were treated with the greatest insolence, abuse, and insult ; --- to which permit ME to add, That Some of them were in the utmost danger of suffering the very last of human evils, by open violence, or more private Assassination. Nay, "they HAVE said, come and let "us root them out, that they be no more a People, and that "the NAME of ISRAEL may be no more in Remembrance."

AT length, "Every man to his Tents," was ostentatiously proclaimed ; and war was levied against our most gracious Sovereign. From that time, all that was bad has been growing unspeakably worse, throughout all the parts of that once happy Country.

HIS Majesty and his Ministers might indeed, by a vigorous exertion of Power, have crushed this rebellion on its first Appearance : But They armed with reluctance ; hoping that Extremities might still be avoided ; and that those deluded Subjects would open their eyes to see "the things belonging to "their peace," and essential to their felicity. As the Fear of exorbitant Taxation, in Consequence of the Claims of Government, had been the principal Complaint on the side of the Colonies ; in order to quiet this fear, and to restore harmony, if possible, an offer was made, under the sanction of Parliamentary Authority, to put the matter in debate on such a footing, as to secure the Americans against the abuse that was dreaded.

BUT the proposal was scornfully rejected, under the Pretence of its being insidiously made ; and within a few days they commenced open Hostilities against the royal troops which had been sent thither --- not to conquer a Rebellious country, but to support the Civil Magistrate in the due execution of his Office. From plundering the King's Stores, and seizing his Forts, that were not secured against such an unexpected and audacious Intrusion, they proceeded to invade those of his adjacent dominions which were disposed to adhere to their duty. And the Success that for a while attended them, exceeded their own Expectations, and added much to their Insolence.
been

It then evidently appeared, that Nothing but the Sword could decide the contest: and it was time to think of providing for this melancholy, but necessary purpose. Accordingly, such a Force was sent over, as soon as the Season and other circumstances permitted. Yet after all, while the Sword was taken in one hand, --- as no injuries or provocations could stifle in the parent kingdom, the natural suggestions of Tenderness and Compassion in favour even of those froward, petulant, and rebellious Children, --- the Olive-branch was extended in the other, still courting them to a peaceful accommodation of the unhappy difference. In what manner this Condescension and Goodness have been also slighted, as well as how brutally the best of Princes and of Men hath been debased and insulted, our late accounts have fully informed us. Alas! REBELLION is like the deaf adder, and regards not the voice of the charmer: it is ever obstinate, and will listen to no entreaties.

FROM the foregoing Sketch it is evident, that Government has been compelled to have recourse to the Sword, after a fruitless trial of every milder method; and we may safely appeal to heaven and earth for the Justice of This Cause. To Heaven indeed we actually make our appeal in the solemn Offices of

THIS DAY ; and we humbly implore its Blessing, in full confidence that our Motives are such as it approves.

IF it be right in a Sovereign State, to attempt the forcible suppression of a wicked and unprovoked Rebellion, after all persuasive methods have failed ; then this War is just, on the part of Government. If it be right in a Kingdom, to attempt the recovery of its own dominions that have been wrested from it by the hand of lawless Usurpation ; then the war is just and necessary. If it be right in a Prince, to afford protection to his loyal and best subjects, against the Tyranny and Oppression of his worst and most disloyal ; then the war is just, necessary, and laudable.

AND here, though I have greatly trespassed upon your patience already, I must beg leave to observe, (and an observation it is, which I am satisfied will afford much pleasure to all those before whom I have the happiness to make it) That even in those revolted Colonies there are still Thousands and Ten-thousands of his Majesty's Subjects, of inflexible Loyalty, who have been induced by no Menaces or Persecutions, to bow the knee to the B A A L of INDEPENDENCY, or to swerve at all from the duties of Allegiance. In this number are included a large Proportion of the men of Property, the Greater Part of the Members of the Church of England, and, in Several of the colonies, all its Clergy, without Exception,--to say nothing of Others. These, from the Beginning, have been the objects of Republican Rage, and fanatic Malignity. The common portion of all having been the most bitter and ignominious Invectives ; to be treated as the off-scouring of the earth ; to be insulted by the very Beasts of the people, and plundered plundered of their Property, without any Means of present Redress, though it is to be hoped, not without a Prospect of Future Retribution.

THOSE who distinguished themselves in opposing the popular measures, met with proportionably severer treatment. Were this a proper time and place for the narrative, I could unfold such scenes of Persecution and Cruelty, as would excite the Indignation and Horror of every Soul in this Assembly. I could give a catalogue of persons, who for the above-mentioned Offence only, have been harassed by Committees, dragged about by the populace, and driven through the streets, with circumstances of Indignity too shocking to be related. I could tell of many, who, on account of their Loyalty, have been reduced from Affluence to Extreme Poverty: of many, who have been torn from their Families, and forced into Banishment, leaving their Wives and Children at the mercy of their Persecutors. Of others, who have been bound and fettered like the worst of Malefactors, and then consigned to endless Imprisonment; where they are, at this time, groaning under the utmost vexation and distress, and perhaps perishing for want of Necessaries: Of others, who have been glad to seek refuge in the Wilderness, for many weeks together, without food and without shelter; where they were still followed and hunted, like so many Beasts of Prey, by their inhuman Tormentors.

AND lastly; I could mention the Conflagration of a fair and flourishing City, unfortunately doomed to more than barbarian fury, for its known Attachment to the Constitution of this Country "above its Fellows," (which the King's troops disdained to injure, and even took Pains to spare, though then in possession of the most ungenerous Enemy,) by a Set of desperate Incendiaries --- instigated, most probably, by still greater Incendiaries at a Distance --- without any Prospect of Advantage to Themselves, and for the sole purpose, it should seem, of doing Injury to Others. In which dreadful calamity, had it not been for the Spirit and Humanity of the British Forces, not only the Loss of immense Property, above what was actually destroyed, must inevitably have ensued ; but, in Many instances, Old and Young would have perished together in one common devastation ; the Sick and Infirm have been consumed upon their " bed of languishing," and the sucking infant have dropt breathless into the flames from the breast of its distracted mother. --- But I would avoid raising any passions, which might interfere with the solemn Devotions of this Day, and therefore hasten my return to the point from which I have wandered.

ONE important object of this war, as hath been intimated, and which proves it to be a just one, is to protect those Loyalists who have been thus persecuted for adhering to their allegiance; and to restore them to their legal rights, and till now undoubted possessions. For these purposes the sword is unsheathed, and the battle set in array : It is with a View that such monstrous " Wickedness of the Wicked may come to an end," (to use the language of my Text) and that the " Just may be established ;" or, in the words of the Royal Proclamation, That the King's " loyal Subjects within his Colonies and Provinces in North America, may be delivered from the violence, " injustice, and tyranny of those daring Rebels, who have assumed to themselves the exercise of arbitrary power." Never was there a more worthy Object of military Exertion ; never was the Power of any Nation better employed !

HAVING

HAVING made the necessary Preparations for this important and unavoidable Contest, we are now to put our trust in ALMIGHTY GOD for Success; and to implore his Blessing on our Fleets and Armies: to humble ourselves before him, under a sense of our Sins; and to form sincere Resolutions of becoming more WORTHY of the Blessings we implore. If throughout the Nation there is a due Compliance with this pious call of our Sovereign, we have great Reason to hope that our prayers will be regarded; that all those heavy Judgments, which our manifold sins and provocations have most justly deserved, will be averted; and that GOD will restore to us the "Blessing of Peace" in every part of this extensive empire. The many important advantages already gained, by the bravery of our troops, under the skilful conduct of their respective Commanders, may THEN be considered as so many Earnests of greater favours, and as introductory to the complete and speedy re-establishment of order, harmony, and good government, in a miserably distracted Country.

On the whole --- It is of the utmost consequence to us, that our present Fasting be not like that of "the Hypocrites," but that it be performed in "simplicity and godly sincerity;" that we "fast not to be seen of men," much less "for strife and debate, and to smite with the fist of wickedness;" --- but in order to "put away the evil of our doings, that so Iniquity may not be our Ruin." If on this occasion we truly "turn unto the LORD our God," we shall find that "he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great Kindness." For such is his goodness, that in consequence of the Repentance and Reformation of sinful Nations, "he repenteth him of the evil" with which he may have threatened threatened them. "Be merciful (therefore) unto us, O God, be merciful unto us, for our soul trusteth in THEE; and under the shadow of thy wings shall be our Refuge, untill this TYRANNY be overpast!"

AND, for the future, let us be particularly guarded against those licentious Principles of the Times, which in their natural Tendency are subversive of Government; which have more immediately contributed to bring on the calamity we now deplore; and which, more than once, have brought this Nation to the very Brink of Destruction.

WHEN men's Principles are wrong, their Practices will seldom be right. When they suppose those Powers to be derived solely from the People, which are "ordained of God," and their heads are filled with ideas of Original Compacts which never existed, and which are always explained so as to answer their present Occasions; no wonder that they confound the duties of Rulers and Subjects, and are perpetually prompted to dictate where it is their Business to obey. When once they conceive the Governed to be superior to the Governors, and that they may set up their pretended Natural Rights in Opposition to the positive Laws of the State; they will naturally proceed to "despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities," and to open a door for Anarchy, "Confusion, and every evil work," to enter.

SUCH wild, visionary, enthusiastic Notions, with regard to Society, have always been counteracted and opposed by the example and instructions of this University; which may without vanity boast, that amid the greatest revolutions of human affairs, and fluctuation of opinions, it hath been steadier in its Principles, Principles, and suffered more for its Consistency in the support of Regal Government, than perhaps any other place of the like nature, in the Christian World. And whilst its supreme literary rank commands the highest respect from all lovers of Science; the Soundness of its religious and political Principles, must secure the esteem of the wise and worthy; and entitle it to the patronage of the great and virtuous.

To conclude: If we wish for national prosperity and happiness, it concerns us in the first place to "fear GOD," that we may obtain the protection and blessing of his good Providence; and then, by a natural progression, we shall "honour the KING," by obeying, and endeavouring to support, his LAWFUL AUTHORITY. The Health of a State requires a regular and due subordination of its Members to the governing power; and its Strength arises from their performing each of them the proper functions assigned them in the political Body, without obstructing one another in their respective Offices.

LET every man then be contented with his Station, and faithfully discharge its attendant duties. Let every private view be abandoned, as soon as it is found to interfere with the Interest and Honour of the Public. And let it be the earnest endeavour of One and All, to promote internal Peace, Harmony, and UNANIMITY, which are things essentially requisite to public prosperity and national happiness. Were it not for our Divisions at home, our Colonies abroad would never have DARED to insult us: and were the Subjects of this Kingdom HAPPILY UNITED, and ready to exert themselves in one proper line of direction for the Common Defence; it would, under Providence, Providence, be invincible; and no Combination of Foreign Powers could make us daunted or dismayed.

MAY that Almighty and All-gracious Being, in whose hands are all the Nations of the Earth, and from whom all good Counsels and all just Works (as well public as private) do proceed, make us "perfect" as a Nation, "stablish, strengthen, SETTLE us!" May we All, in our respective stations, be excited and enabled to correct what is amiss, and to "hold fast that which is good!" May we learn to "be of one Mind, and live in Peace; and the God of Love and Peace shall be with us!" To Him be ascribed all Glory and Dominion, Adoration and Praise, for ever and ever, AMEN.

F I N I S.

Many of our readers having desired us to admit the following letter, we do it with great pleasure to oblige them.

To the Right Reverend the BISHOP of LONDON.

IF I am not very much mistaken, your Lordship's respectable name was the second, which near a year ago stood in a certain subscription for the relief of the American clergy. The late arch-bishop of York took the lead, and the primate of all England condescended to appear the third in that very numerous list. It is not mine, nor perhaps any man's business to be desirous of knowing why his Grace of Canterbury on this occasion waved the point of precedency: the fact is here only mentioned to vindicate the propriety of this address to your Lordship, who, on the demise of Dr. Drummond, may justly be supposed the first person to see the many thousands, which were contributed to this purpose, applied with judgment and discretion.

It is said that an advertisement appeared in one or more of the news-papers some months ago, intimating that a particular account of the sums distributed to the distressed clergy would shortly be given to the public. I presume that the long indisposition of his Grace of York might retard this publication; and I presume also that, as the business has but lately devolved on your Lordship, it may be sometime before this account may be ready for the inspection of the public. In the mean while there is one question concerning this matter, which may be as easily answered as it is now plainly put, and which with all due submission your Lordship is here called upon to answer. It is this. "Has Myles Cooper, Doctor of Laws, President of King's College in New York, and Fellow of Queen's College in Oxford, received any part of the charity in question?"

To expect an answer to this, without giving a reason for asking it, would be treating your Lordship with a disrespect that is very far from the intention of the writer of this letter. He means, it is true, to address you with great plainness, nay, perhaps boldness, but he means to address you with politeness and decorum; and, therefore, as true politeness does not consist in ceremony, he will lay it aside at present, and explain as briefly as possible the reasons that induced him to make this inquiry.

This said Dr. Myles Cooper has just now printed a sermon preached before the university of Oxford, and published at the request of the Vice Chancellor and the heads of the Houses, with the imprimatur of Dr. Horne. In this discourse, amongst other very objectionable passages, I find the following, which I shall transcribe verbatim, and then make a short comment upon it; a short one, I trust, will suffice, when I am writing to your Lordship; when I am writing to the friend of civil liberty, and of the protestant defenders of that liberty in the line of Brunswick.

"For the future, let us be particularly guarded against those licentious principles of the times, which in their natural tendency are subversive of government; which have more immediately contributed to bring on the calamity we now deplore, and which more than once have brought this nation to the brink of ruin."

What these licentious principles are, the preacher explains in the next paragraph:

"When mens principles are wrong, the practices will seldom be right. When they suppose those powers to be derived solely from the people, which are ordained of God, and their heads are filled with ideas of original compacts which never existed, and which are always explained so as to answer their present occasions, no wonder that they confound the duties of rulers and subjects, and are perpetually prompted to dictate where it is their business to obey. When once they conceive the governed to be superior to the governors, and that they may set up their pretended natural rights in opposition to the positive laws of the state, they will naturally proceed to despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities, and to open the door for anarchy, confusion, and every evil work to enter." See page 22.

The licentious principle, which in the following paragraph he also calls wild, visionary, and enthusiastic, your Lordship sees are precisely those very principles which Locke and Hoadley employed to vindicate the revolution and the settlement of the Hanover succession. The Jus divinum is here also expressly asserted, though couched under a fragment of a text of scripture, which (as most such fragments are) is totally misapplied, and the revolution itself stigmatized, as having brought his nation to the very brink of destruction. For it is said, that these principles have more than once done this. I know but of three Eras that the preacher could possibly allude to in the whole course of English history; either to the temporary subversion of monarchy by Cromwell, the re-establishment of Protestant Monarchy by King William, or the security of such monarchy's continuation by the act of settlement. To any insurrection or civil war previous to the first of these Eras, it is impossible that the preacher could allude, neither ought he to have had even the time of Cromwell in his view, because it is well known that very different principles from these did then predominate. But to the Era of the revolution these principles do apply, and that strongly; to the Era of the accession of the House of Hanover do they apply, and still more strongly; and these are the principles which this Oxford Doctor asserts has brought these realms more than once to the brink of ruin.

Surely, my lord, I need say nothing more than this to vindicate the propriety of the present address. I am certain your lordship will take due notice of it, and that I shall receive from you the information which I solicit: Not by means of a News-paper; an anonymous writer has no claim to such attention. It would perhaps be too great a condescension in your lordship to order your chaplain, your secretary, or even the agent for the charity in question, to publish an advertisement on the occasion; yet I am still persuaded, that I shall speedily, by means of this letter, know all that I want to know; for the contents of it must appear of such importance, that you will of necessity make it a topic of your table conversation, and, what you shall then say, will certainly spread further; as it is hardly possible that you can wish any of your guests to keep your sentiments on such a matter secret. Besides this, the curiosity of many of the subscribers to the charity will be raised, and your lordship will undoubtedly be asked the same question, viva voce, which I can only put to you in this more distant manner: In the end, however, I make no doubt but I shall be possess'd of the intelligence wanted.

If this intelligence should prove of the affirming kind, I am persuaded that your lordship will feel no little compunction for having given this Doctor any part of that money which many persons of the truest constitutional principles contributed to what they thought a constitutional purpose. If the plan pursued in the distribution of this charity, was to allot it in the way of annual pension to deserving individuals, I am certain you will strike this individual off the list, as of all others the most undeserving; because, as your lordship, from this specimen, cannot but be persuaded that he preached the same doctrines in America, and endeavouring to disseminate them amongst his pupils in the College of New-York, you must consequently be certain, that he did all in his power towards alienating the minds of his Majesty's subjects from all just ideas of Civil Government, and was himself one cause (perhaps a stronger than any which he has enumerated in his sermon) of the present deplorable defection of our American brethren.

I have the Honour to be,
My Lord,
Your Lordship's very Respectful Servant,
A DISCIPLE of LOCKE.

IMPORTS, January, 10. and 11.

Streights	J Levy 22 ton valonia
	Pickersall and co 2631 thro silk
	Chapman and co 6051 kid skins
Smirna	Cazalet and co 137 raw silk, 6571 goat hair, 3121 cotton yarn, 202 emery stones
	R Willis 3ml raw silk, 30ml cotton wool
Petersburgh	J Henckell, junr. 19c iron
	H Atkins 4 ton hemp, 2 ton tow
	Atkinson and co 4c flax
Gottenbro	J Henckell, junr. 26 ton iron
Offend	Bird and co 801 silvers thread
	King and co 831 otto
	W R Mollison 25ml tobacco
Hambro	J Whebel 6ml lin yarn
	J Guth 18c carraway seed

To be Sold by private Contract,
By Mr. SQUIBB,

THE unexpired Term of the LEASE of an elegant HOUSE situate in GREAT CUMBER- LAND-STREET, PORTMAN-SQUARE:

Consisting of four Rooms on the principal Floor; three ditto on the Ground and second Floor, with four Servants Rooms, and every requisite Office. A Coach House and Stable, if required.

To be viewed, by Tickets, (which may be had of Mr. Squibb, Charles-street, Barkely-square) from Eleven to Two in the Morning, and from Three to Five in the Afternoon

To be SOLD.

THREE very fine young Holstein Horses, lately brought to England; they are Horses of great strength and very active, upwards of fifteen hands high with full manes and tails, and in every respect very complete Horses to mount an officer. Two of them are of a brown bay, and would match well in harness.

They may be seen any morning before 12 o'clock at Mr. Angelo's Riding-house, in King's-square-court, Soho.

To the LADIES.

An infallible Remedy against (supposed) BARRENNESS and Female IMBECILITY.

AN experienced Physician, who for many years has made the Diseases of WOMEN, the chief object of his medical enquiries, has been happy enough to discover a Medicine, which, after many years repeated trials of its success, he ventures to propose to the FAIR SEX, as an infallible Remedy against supposed Barrenness; a most powerful strengthener, and in one word, a safe, but certain cure of every degree of Female Imbecility. The Doctor is not such a novice in the world, as to be ignorant, how much it is the interest of some to depreciate, and of others to treat with levity a Medicine of this sort. But conscious of his integrity, of the efficacy of his medicine, and of the mighty importance of an offspring to some, and its singular satisfaction to all married people. He is happy to offer to such Ladies, whose marriage-bed has not yet been fruitful, a certain means to remove their anxiety, and to complete their laudable desires. "Even the most ignorant are not strangers to the wonderful power of Herbs and Drugs."

The Medicine inclosed in a printed paper of directions is sold at Mrs. Barker's Perfumery-warehouse, Albemarle-street, near Piccadilly. Price only a Physicians single fee, One Guinea.

This day is published, the Second Edition corrected
Price 1s. 6d.

EXERCISES for Turning ENGLISH into FRENCH, with the Grammatical Rules, digested in a Plain and Easy Method. Whereby Scholars of the tenderest Capacity are enabled to write the French Language with Propriety.

By A. SCOT, A.M. Member of the University of Paris. Extract from the Preface of this Edition.

The first Edition of the Exercises has met with such favourable Reception from the Public, that the Author has been encouraged to reprint them. The Learner will find, in the Second Edition, a great Variety of new Rules and Examples.

The Rules concerning the Articles, and their Use, are set down in a plainer and easier Manner than in most Performances of this Kind; as likewise the Position of the Adjectives & Conjunctive Pronouns. The Government of the Verbs, the Use of the Moods, and the Rules to know when the Participles are declinable, are explained with the greatest Perspicuity. The Use of the Negations are thoroughly expressed: In short, no Pains have been spared to render every Part of the French Syntax as intelligible as possible.

Printed for Richardson and Urquhart, under the Royal Exchange.

This day is published, Price 2s. sewed,
The Fourth Edition, corrected, of ONANISM, or, a Treatise upon the Disorders produced by MASTURBATION: or, the dangerous Effects of secret and excessive VENERY. By M. TISSOT, M. D. Fellow of the ROYAL SOCIETY of LONDON, Member of the Medico-Physical Society of Basil, and of the Oeconomical Society of Berne. Translated from the last PARIS EDITION, by A. HUME, M. D.

Propriis extinctum vivere criminibus. GALL.

London: Printed for Richardson and Urquhart, under the Royal Exchange.

Extract from the Preface.

"In writing upon Inoculation, says, Dr. Tissot proposed promulgating the properest method of stopping the ravages of a fatal Disorder; and I have the satisfaction of having done, at least some Good. In composing this Work, I was in hopes of stopping the progress of a Corruption more baneful, perhaps, than even the Small Pox; and the more to be dreaded, as by its working in the Shades in Mystery, it secretly undermines, without even those who are its Victims, thinking of its Malignity. It was necessary to divulge it, and I have many reasons for thinking that I have been so fortunate as to be useful."

PILGRIM'S PROGRESS; with the Life of the Author prefixed. By a Friend of the Gospel.

CONDITIONS.

I. This Work will be printed on fine Paper, and a new Letter.

II. That the two first Numbers will contain each one sheet and a half of Letter-press, and two beautiful Copper-plates; and with every Number after will be given one sheet and an half of Letter-press, with an elegant Copper-Plate, masterly engraved.

III. That the Money for the first Number will be returned if it should not be approved.

IV. The Whole will be comprized in twenty Numbers, with twenty two Copper-plates, from new Designs, making one handsome Volume in Octavo.

Any Person chusing to be supplied with more than one Number per Week, may be accommodated, the whole being completed, or may be had handsomely bound.

Printed for T. Axtell, at the Royal Exchange; T. Waters, South Audley-street, Grosvenor-square; and sold by J. Whitaker, in Mitre-court, Fleet-street, and all Book-sellers and News-Carriers in Town and Country.

This Day is published, Price 10s. bound,

A COMPARATIVE VIEW of the several Methods of promoting Religious Instruction, from the earliest down to the present Time; from which the superior Excellence of that recommended in the Christian Institutes, particularly from the Illustration of Scripture History and Characters, is evinced and demonstrated. 2 vols.

By DUNCAN SHAW, D. D. Minister at Raiford.

Respicere exemplar vitæ, morumque jubebo.

Sales by Auction.

By Mr. RIDGEWAY.

On the Premises, on Monday the 20th of January next, and following day, beginning each day at eleven o'clock, by order of the assignees,

THE neat and genuine Household Furniture, a tub-bottomed post chariot almost new; a pair of brown bay coach geldings, two whiskeys, linen, and china. Also the live and dead stock, consisting of fifteen cows, a young bull, four saddle nags, thirty quarters of corn, twenty load of fine old hay, two hay carts, green-house plants, garden utensils, and other effects, of

Mr. SAMUEL JUSTICE, Merchant, At Padnal House, near the ten mile stone, on the Romford road, in the county of Essex.

The said effects may be publicly viewed on Friday and Saturday preceding the sale, when catalogues may be had on the premises; at the Cock and Bell at Romford; and of Mr. Ridgeway, in Fenchurch-street, London.

By Mr. RIDGEWAY,

On the Premises, at Padnal Corner, about one mile from the ten mile stone, on the Romford road, in the county of Essex, by order of the Assignees of Mr. SAMUEL JUSTICE, Merchant, on Monday the 20th of January next, at eleven o'clock,

A LEASEHOLD ESTATE, held for a term, of which nineteen years are unexpired, at a yearly rent of 143l. 18s. and consists of a large and spacious Mansion-house, called PADNAL-HOUSE, with double coach-house; stables; brew-house, &c. extensive pleasure and kitchen garden, planted with variety of fruit-trees; the pleasure garden laid out in slope lawns, and gravel wilderness walks, a large canal and fish pond stored with carp and tench, melon ground, and two green houses, and about sixteen acres of fine meadow land contiguous, late in the possession of the said Mr. Justice. Likewise a compact Farm adjoining, containing about 12 acres of pasture, arable, and woodland; a good dwelling-house, barns, cow-houses, and other offices, left to Mr. French, on lease, at 120l. per annum. Also a Cottage and a Field of Pasture Land; the cottage is left at 2l. 10s. per ann. The abovementioned premises are delightfully situated on a fine gravel soil near the verge of the forest, and the purchaser will be entitled to a pastorage on many thousand acres of land.

The whole may be viewed on Friday and Saturday preceding the sale, and at any other time, by an order from Mr. Ridgeway.

Printed particulars may be then had on the premises; also at the Cock and Bell at Romford; and of Mr. Ridgeway, Fenchurch-street, London.

By Mr. RIDGEWAY,

On the Premises, on Wednesday the 29th of January next, and the two following days, beginning each day at 11 o'clock, by order of the assignees,

THE rich and genuine HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE, five hundred ounces of modern plate, household linen, valuable china in table and tea sets, and ornamental figures; Marseilles earthen ware, strong panel iron chest, books, pictures, print, wines, old rum, and other effects of

Mr. SAMUEL JUSTICE, Merchant.

At his House, No. 6, Austin Friars.

The whole may be viewed on Monday and Tuesday previous to the sale.

Catalogues may then be had on the premises; and of Mr. Ridgeway, Fenchurch-street.

By Mr. RIDGEWAY

On the Premises, on Wednesday the 29th of January next, at 12 o'clock, by order of the Assignees of Mr. SAMUEL JUSTICE,

THE LEASE of a spacious and genteel DWELLING-HOUSE, exceedingly well situate for a Merchant, in Austin Friars, near the Royal Exchange, held for a term, of which near 17 years are unexpired, at the yearly rent of 90l.

The premises are replete with every convenience; have had a considerable sum of money expended thereon in judicious improvements, and consists as follows:

On the attic story—A large laundry and three servants bed-rooms.

On the second floor—Three good bed-chambers, a dressing-room, and four light closets.

On the principal floor—Two elegant drawing-rooms, a large dining room, music room, and store room.

On the ground floor—A parlour, accounting house, two warehouses, kitchen, housekeeper's room, skultery, &c. Below stairs—Two dry wine vaults, and other cellar room.

Adjoining the yard—A good coach-house, stable, and loft over.

The premises may be viewed two days preceding the sale.

Printed particulars may be had in a few days on the premises; and of Mr. Ridgeway in Fenchurch-street.

Mirth admit me of thy Crew.

This Day is published,

Decorated with Embellishments, Price 1s. 3d.

THE FORTUNE-TELLING ALMANACK, or ENTERTAINING ORACLE: Composed of upwards of 400 droll Questions, so contrived, that the Mystery of the different ingenious Solutions, never fail to have the most laughable and pleasing Effect; and are suitably classed, for single, married, and widow Ladies; Batchelors, Husbands, Widowers, &c. &c. of all Denominations. Improved from the French by a Lady of Quality, for the Diversion of a select Number of her Friends. The whole affording a most pleasing and rational Fund of Mirth and Festivity for every Day in the Year.

Printed for G. RILEY, at Sterne's Head, in Curzon-street, May-Fair, and sold at all the Toyshop.

Of whom may be had,

Published this Day, Price 2s. 6d.

Adorned with exact Likenesses of all the Kings and Queens who have reigned since the Invasion of Julius Caesar,

A New Entertaining History of England, from the earliest Accounts to the present Time; exhibited on a new-invented PACK of PLAYING CARDS, with Rules for playing the Game.

Specimen of one of the Cards.

THE BRITONS.

THE Britons enjoyed a fertile soil, a mild Climate, with the simplicity of almost primitive Nature; ranging unmolested over their rich Fields and verdant Forests, in search of the Necessaries or Pleasures of a frugal Life. The spoil of the ingenious Silk Worm, the Fleece or Skin of the domestic or savage Beasts, covered not their Bodies, inured as they were to the Change of Seasons; and for the Ornament of which they borrowed the Colour of the Sky, the Figures of the Celestial Luminaries, and the Forms of Animals. They were governed by a Society of Wise Men, who, under the Name of Druids and Bards, directed their Worship to their Maker, enforced the few Laws they wanted, and instructed them in natural Philosophy. Sometimes, round a venerable Oak, they sung with them the Praise of Virtue, the Thanksgiving to Heaven. As the Passions inherent in Mankind were not stipulated among them by the artificial ones of Avarice and Ambition, their Quarrels were soon de-